"Creators are using AI to prank loved ones with fake 'homeless intruders,' but the police aren't laughing"

There's a new TikTok trend, and it's dangerous and manipulative.

People are using AI to generate false images of "homeless" men entering their houses to trick their parents, roommates, or partners. In one viral video, creator Joe Mele used AI to create an image of someone who looks unhoused standing on the other side of his screened front door. He sent the picture to his dad with the text: "Hey dad there's this guy at the front door, he says he knows you?"
